

What should happen to your brain after you die?

Glasgow Science Centre

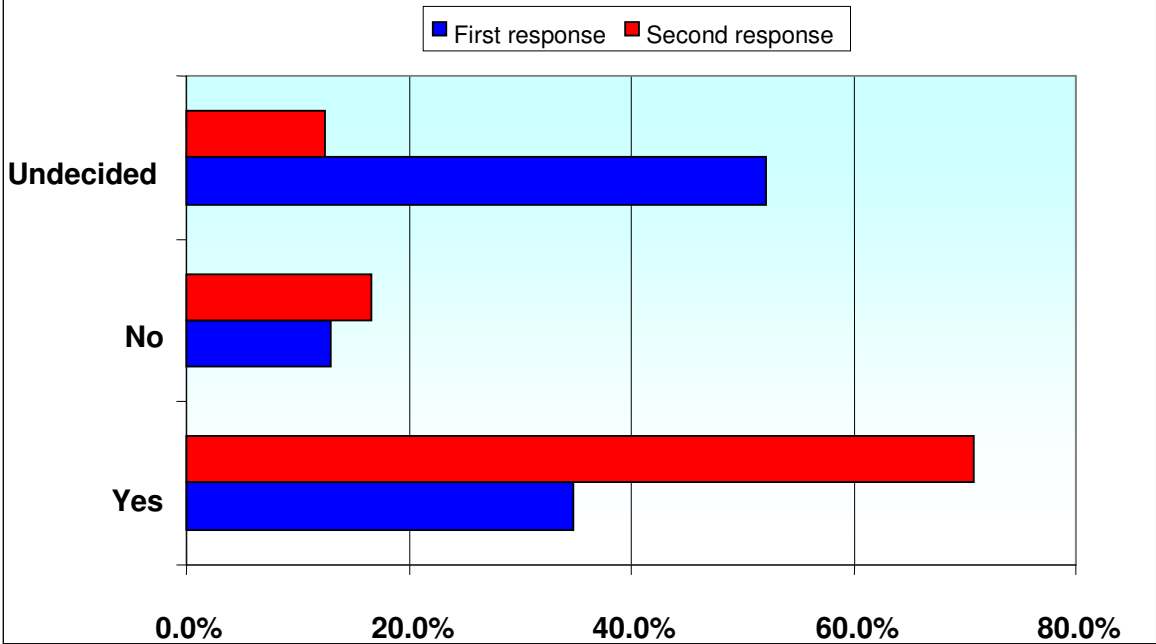

4 March 2011

Voting results

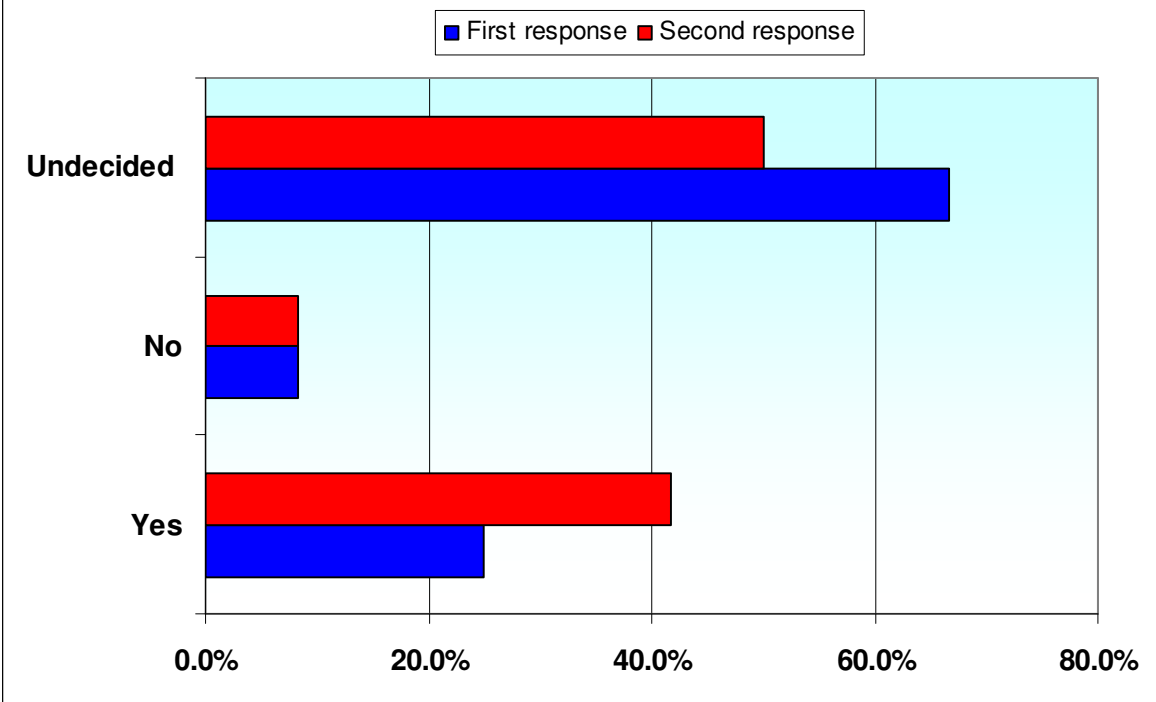

Session 1:

Would You Want your Brain to be Used for Research After Your Death

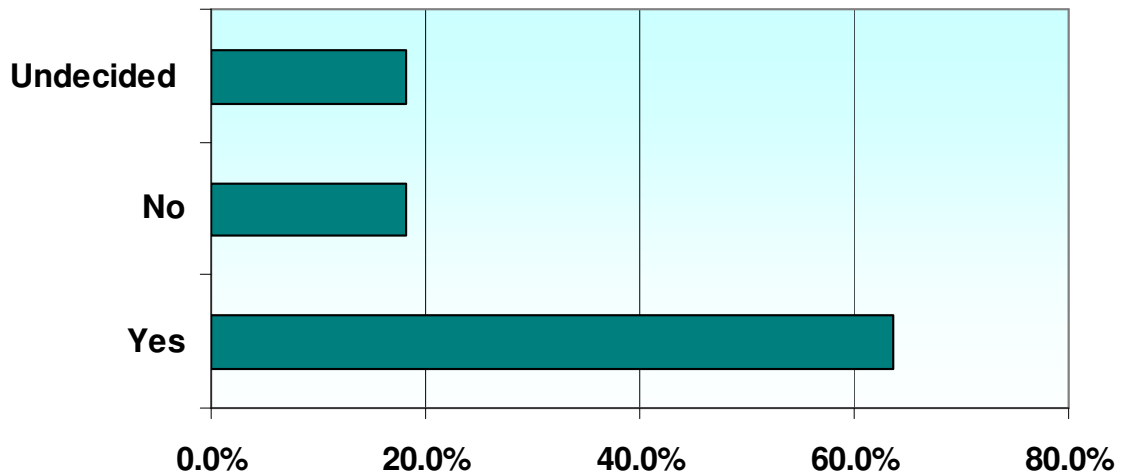

Would You Want the Brain of One of Your Family Members To Be Used For Research

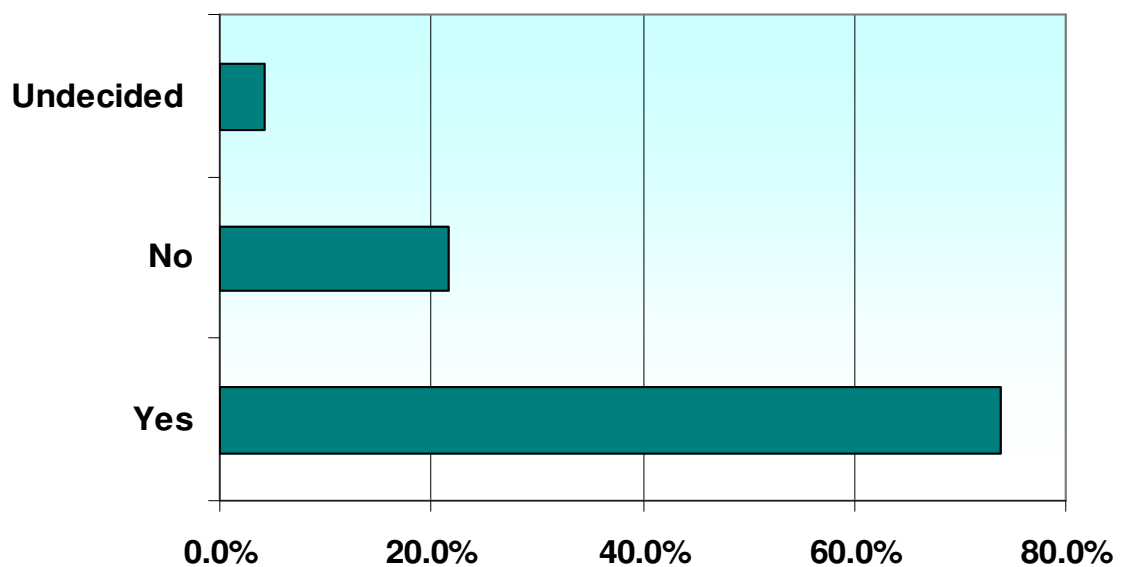

Session 2:

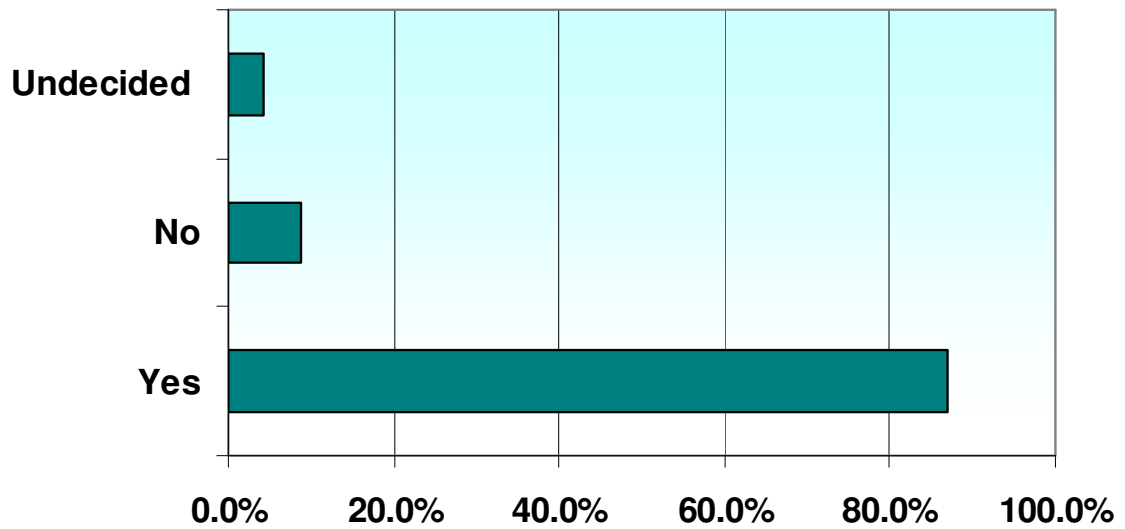

Can Studying Brains Tell Us Things About What It Means To Be Human that We Can't Learn From Studying Other Organs

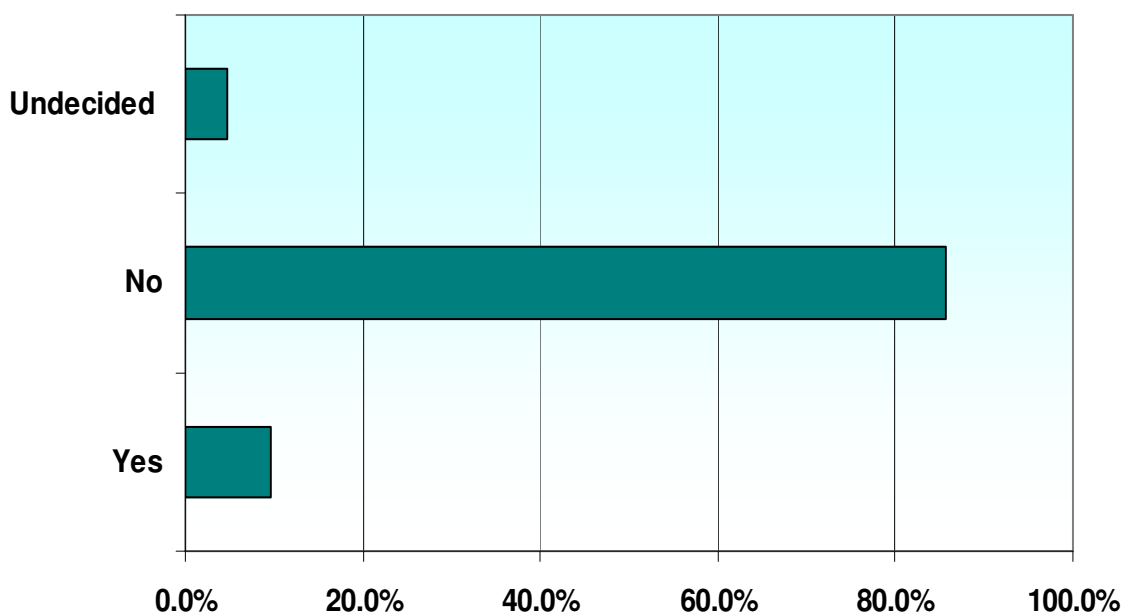

Is Organ Donation For Research Different From Organ Donation For Transplantation

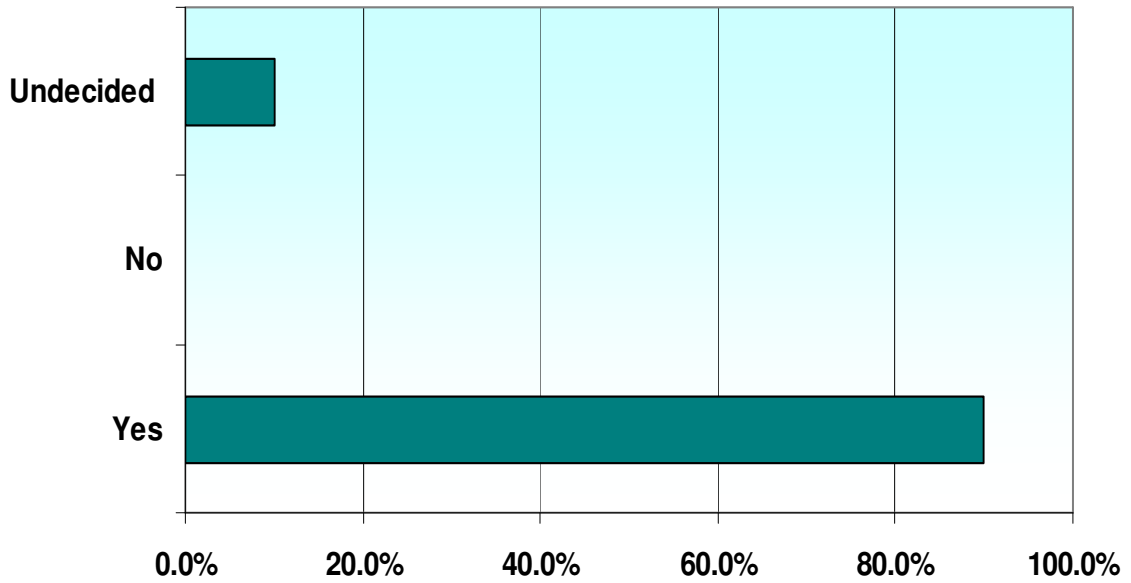

Is Brain Donation For Research Different From The Donation of Other Organs For Transplantation

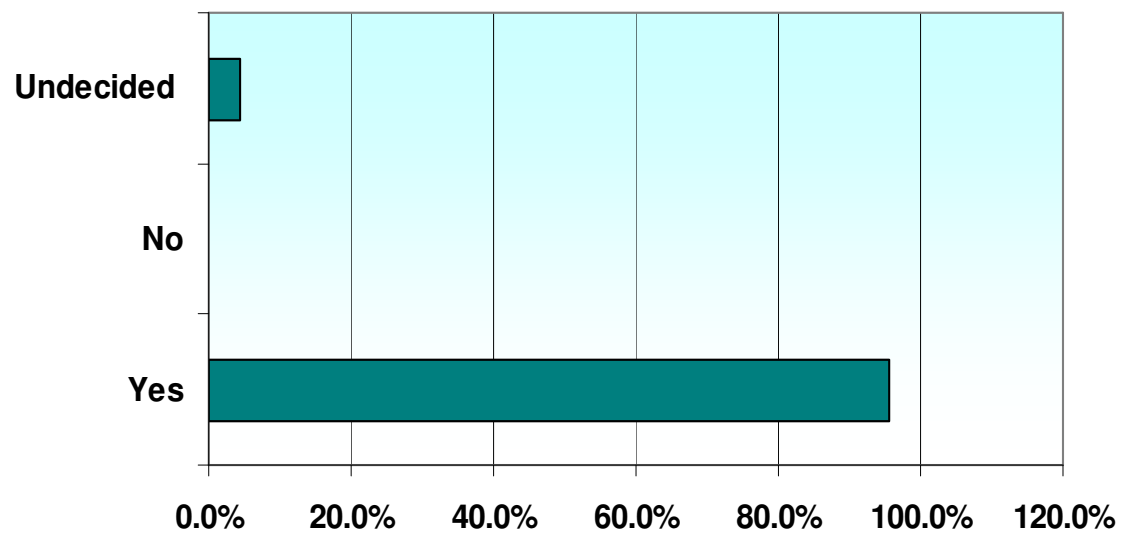

Should It Be Assumed That Organ Donor Card Carriers Would Want To Donate Their Brains For Research

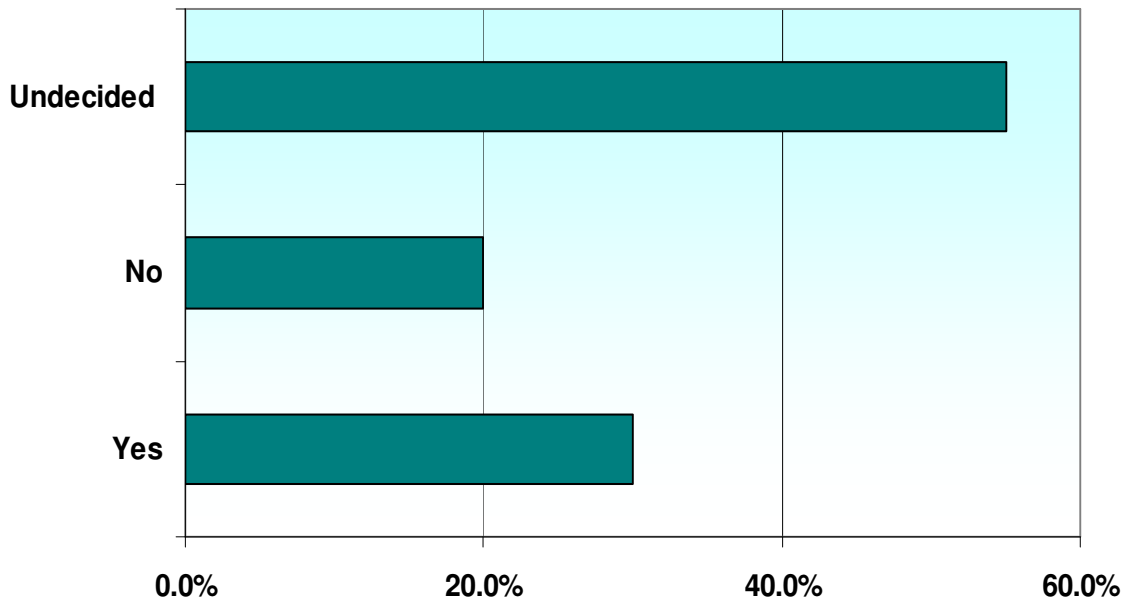

In Order To Obtain Normal Tissue Samples, Should There Be a Publicity Campaign To Encourage Donations From People With No Neurological Disease

Should Potential Donors Of Normal Brain Tissue Sign Up To Join A Donor Register Prior To Their Death

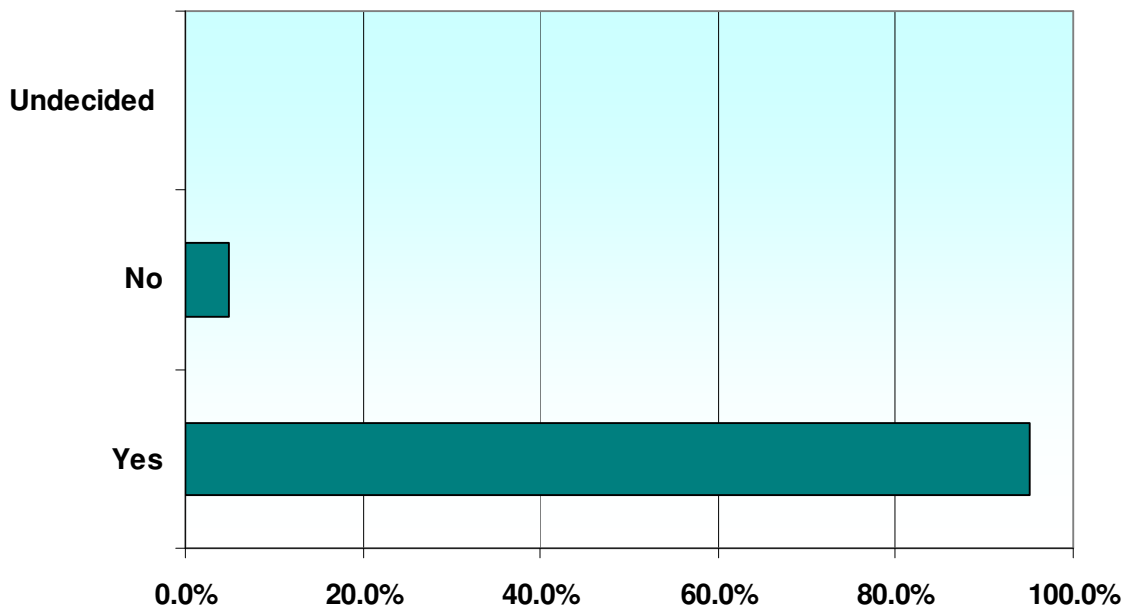

Should The Post Mortem Donation Of Brain Tissue For Research Be Arranged At The Same Time As Organ Donation For Transplantation

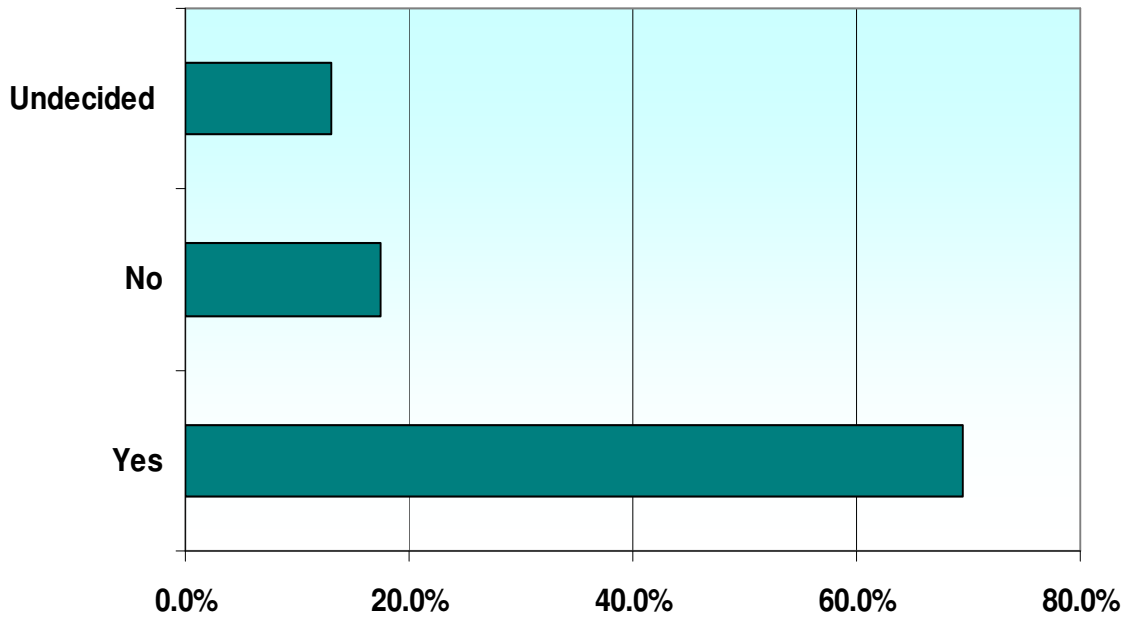

Session 3:

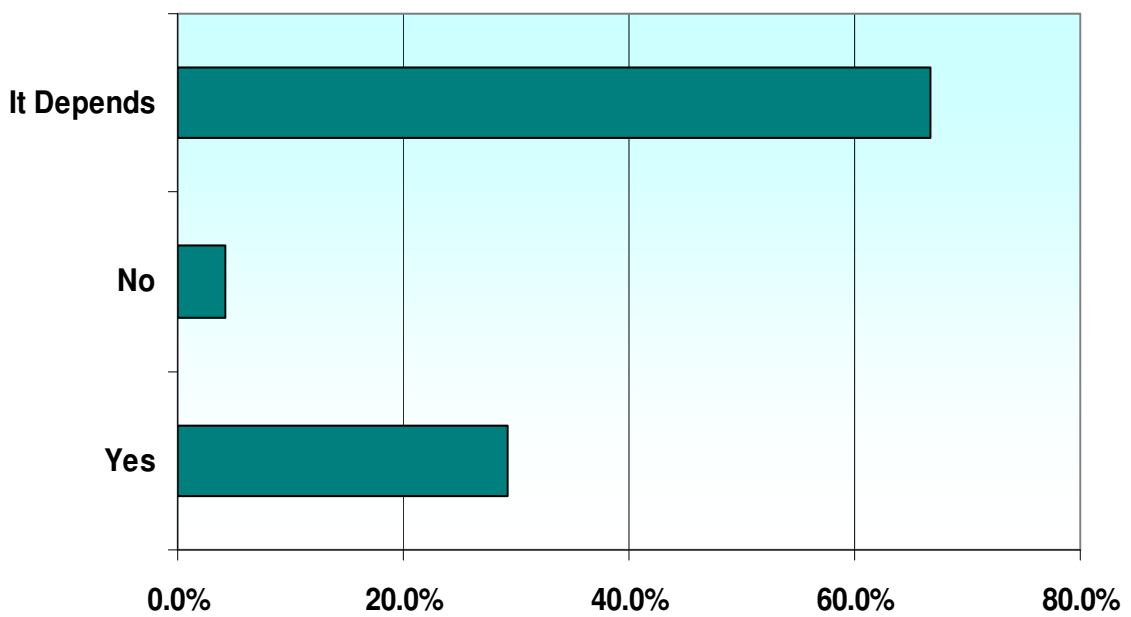

Should Research On Human Brain Tissue Be Subject To Legal Regulation

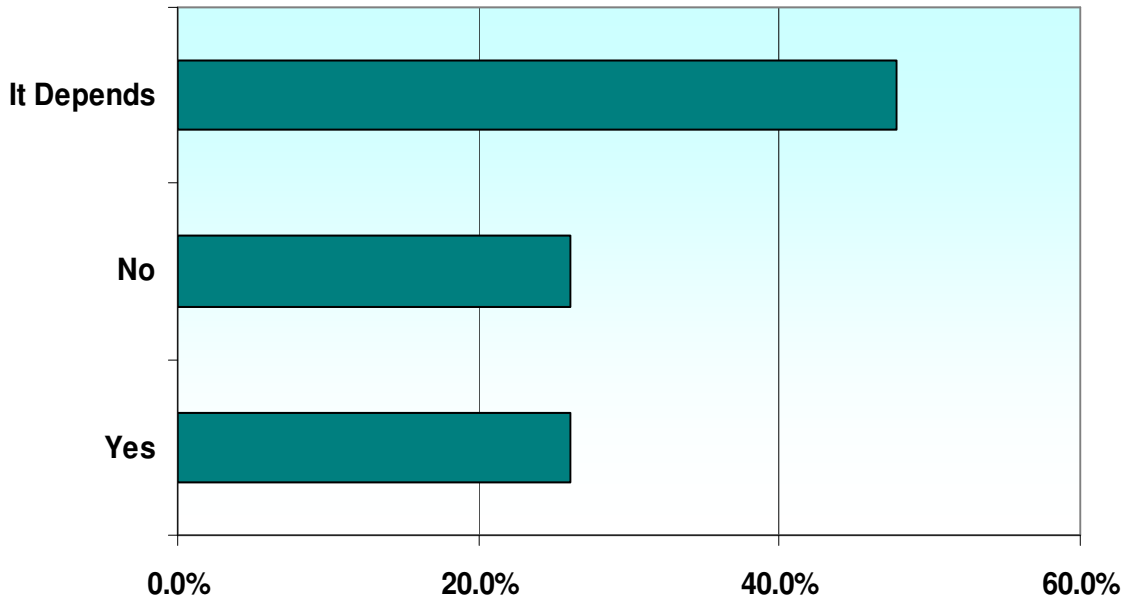

Should There Be A Special Authority, Such As The Human Tissue Authority, With Responsibility For Regulating Brain Tissue And Other Human Tissue

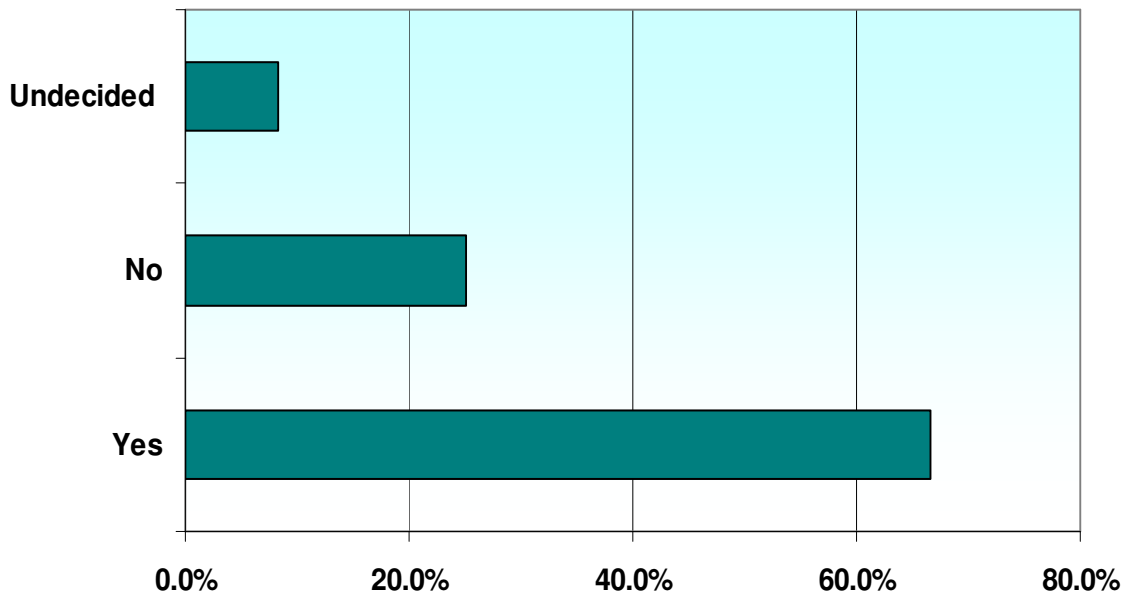

Should People With Degenerative Brain Diseases Be Considered Competent To Consent To Brain Donation

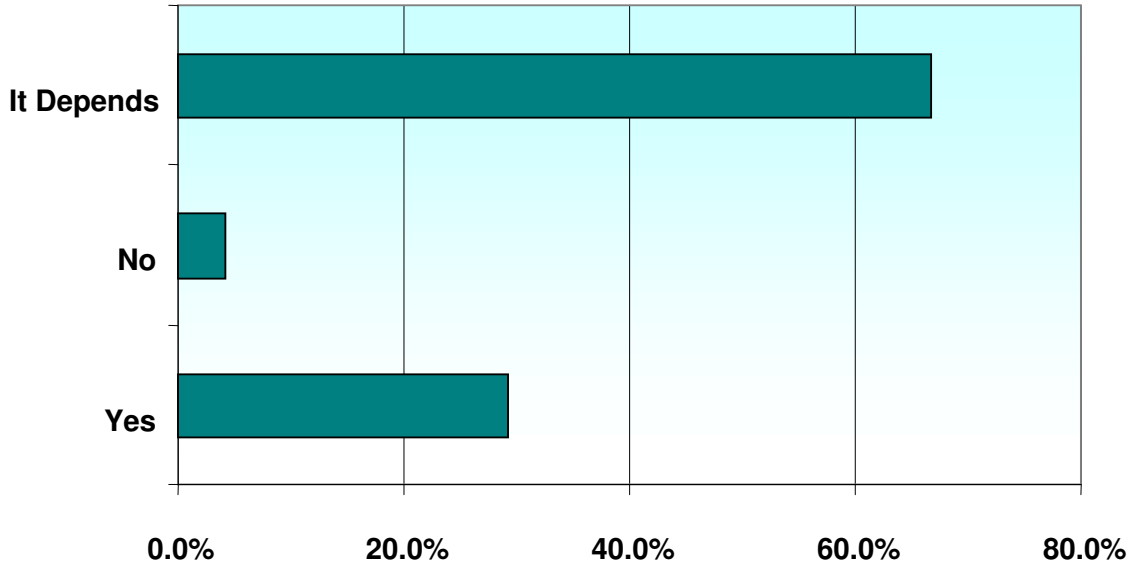

Should The Results Of Any Investigations On Donated Brain Tissue Be Made Available To Relatives/Next Of Kin

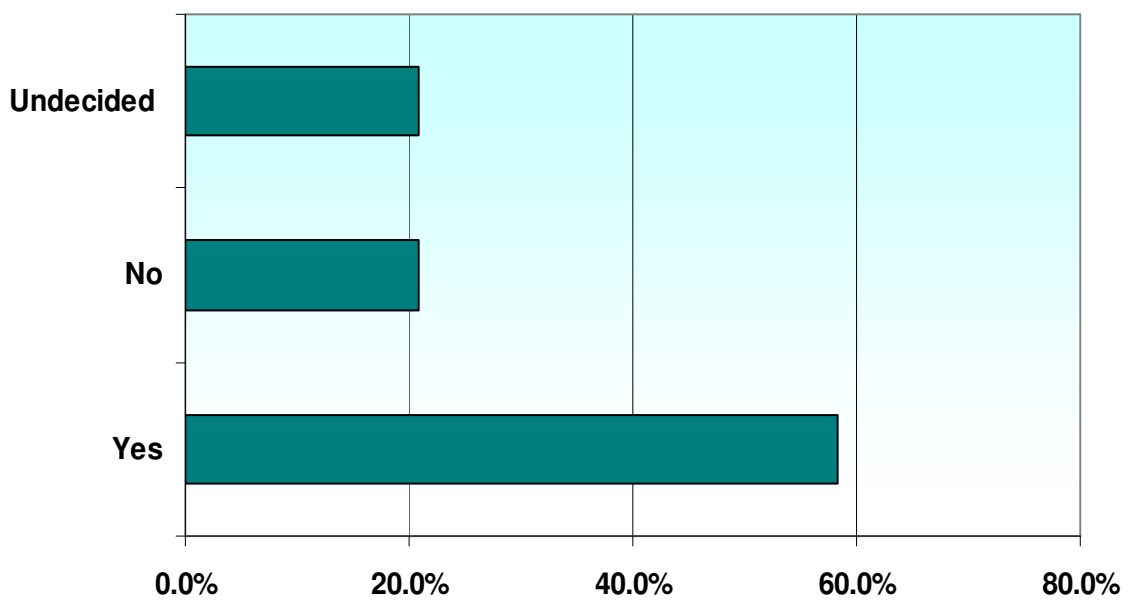

Should Donated Brains, And Any Personal Records Relating To Those Brains, Be Irreversibly Anonymised For Purposes Of Research

Should Researchers Be Permitted To Access Other Data, Such As Health, Education or Criminal Records, About The Individuals Whose Brains There Are Studying

Would You Be Prepared To Donate Samples Of Your Brain Rather Than Your Whole Brain For Research

Should Donated Brain Tissue Be Used For Commercial Profit

